MANY NEW CASES OF INFLUENZA

Epidemic Causes Twenty More Deaths -in Denver.

Denver, Oct. 19.--Misunderstanding by the police of the closing order for stores in the downtown business district because of the influenza epidemic resulted in a mixup all over Denver Thursday evening, with the police closing business places in all sections. The order contemplates only the closing at 6 o'clock p. m. of stores employing more than two clerks within the zone. Outside business places are not affected.

The reports to Dr. William H. Sharpley, manager of health, show that for the twenty-four hours ending at noon Friday, there were twenty additional deaths, making a total of 128. There are 291 new cases reported, making a total of 2,165.

In the state the situation is unchanged, according to Dr. E. E. Kennedy, secretary of the State Board of Health. Dr. Kennedy had a dispatch from Surgeon General Blue stating that a public health service was being organized in each state in the Union and notifying him that he was directed to organize Colorado.

At every county fair in Colorado it is planned to have food saving brought before the people in a new way by Margaret George, noted Eng-lish artist, whose great talent now has been turned into a weapon with which to fight the Kaiser and his American allies, the Food Wasters. Last week at Brighton, at Chevenne

Wells, at Walsenburg and other towns where county fairs were held, Miss George held the crowds fascinated by her "chalk talks" on food saving.

Any county fair may obtain her services by communicating with Miss Anne Evans, chairman of the home conservation division, U. S. Food Ad-ministration, 614 Interstate Trust Building, Denver.

They knew at once that I was an made for my transportation to Engescaped prisoner and they readily land at once. Fortunately there was paid the chauffeur and invited me to give some account of myself.

They treated me most cordially and were intensely interested in the brief account I gave them of my adventures. Word was sent to the consul general and he immediately sent for me. When I went in he shook hands with me, greeting me very heartily and offering me a chair.

He then sat down, screwed a monocle on his eye and viewed me from top to toe. I could see that only good breeding kept him from laughing at the spectacle I presented. I could see he wanted to laugh in the worst way.

"Go ahead and laugh !" I said. "You can't offend me the way I feel this blessed day !" and he needed no second invitation. Incidentally it gave me a chance to laugh at him, for I was about as much amused as he was.

After he had laughed himself about sick he got up and slapped me on the back and invited me to tell him my story.

"Lieutenant," he said when I had concluded, "you can have anything you want. I think your experience entitles you to it."

"Well, consul," I replied, "I would like a bath, a shave, a haircut and some civilized clothes about as badly as a man ever needed them, I suppose, but before that I would like to get a cable off to America to my mother telling her that I am safe and on my way to England!"

The consul gave me the necessary information and I had the satisfaction of knowing before I left the office that the cable, with its good tidings, was on its way to America.

Then be sent for one of the naval men who had been interned there since the beginning of the war and who was able to speak Dutch and told him to take good care of me.

After I had been bathed and shaved and had a haircut I bought some new clothes and had something to eat, and I felt like a new man.

As I walked through the streets of Rotterdam breathing the air of freedom again and realizing that there was no longer any danger of being captured and taken back to prison, it was a wonderful sensation.

I don't believe there will ever be a country that will appear in my eyes quite as good as Holland did then. I receive it and the pride she would had to be somewhat careful, however, feel as she exhibited it among her because Holland was full of German neighbors and friends.

After I was fixed up I returned to was and how I happened to be there. the consulate and arrangements were a boat leaving that very night and I was allowed to take passage on it. Just as we were leaving Rotterdam, the boat I was on rammed our own convoy, one of the destroyers, and injured it so badly that it had to put back to port. It would have been a strange climax to my adventure if the disaster had resulted in the sinking of my boat and I had lost my life while on my way to England after having successfully outwitted the Huns. But my luck was with me to the last, and while the accident resulted in some delay our boat was not seriously damaged and made the trip over in schedule time and without further accident, another destroyer having been assigned to escort us through the danger zone in place of the one which had been put out of commission.

When I arrived in London, the reaction from the strain I had been under for nearly three months imm diately became apparent. My nerv were in such a state that it was abs lutely impossible for me to cross th street without being in deadly fe: of being run over or trampled. I stor at the curb, like an old woman fro the country on her first visit to th city, and I would not venture acros until some knowing policeman, reco, nizing my condition, came to my a sistance and convoyed me across. Indeed, there was a great number (English officers at home at all time "getting back their nerves" after long spell of active service at th front, so that my condition was an thing but novel to the London bo bies.

It was not many days, however, b fore I regained control of myself an felt in first-class shape.

Although the British authorities ... Holland had wired my mother from Holland that I was safe and on my way to England, the first thing I did when we landed was to send her a cable myself. The cable read as follows:

"Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, Momence, Ill., U. S. A. "Just escaped from Germany. Letter follows."

As I delivered it to the cable dispatcher I could just imagine the exultation with which my mother would

I could hear the volley of "I told spies and I knew they would be keen I could hear the volley of "I told to learn all they possibly could about you so's" that greeted her good tidings. "It would take more than the kaiser to keep Pat in Germany," I could hear troops and similar matters. Then the caused me in Belgium. It read as aviation experts would take a whack follows: at me and discuss with me all I had observed of German flying corps methods and equipment. Then, again, the food experts would interrogate me as to what I had learned of food conditions in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium, and as I had lived pretty close to the ground for the best part of seventy-two days I was able to give them some fairly accurate reports as to actual agricultural conditions, many of the things I told them probably having more significance to them than they had to me. There were many things I had observed which I have not referred to in these pages because their value to us might be diminished if the Germans knew we were aware of them, but they were all reported to the authorities and it was very gratifying to me to hear that the experts considered some of them of the greatest value.

One of the most amusing incidents my bankers in London to get my personal effects.

Of course, there was only one thing to do and that was to obey orders. I was an officer in the army and the king was my commander in chief, I had to go, and so I sat down and sent off the following answer:

I told him that I had heard similar reports, but that I did not notice any appreciable difference in my treatment from that accorded Britishers.

The king declared that he believed my escape was due to my pluck and will power and that it was one of the most remarkable escapes he had ever heard of, which I thought was quite a compliment, coming as it did from the king of England.

"I hope that all the Americans will give as good an account of themselves as you have, leftenant," he said, "and I feel quite sure they will. I fully appreciate all the service rendered us by Americans before the States entered the war."

At this moment I asked him if I was taking too much time.

"Not at all, leftenant, not at all !" he replied, most cordially. "I was extremely interested in the brief report that came to me of your wonderful escape and I sent for you because wanted to hear the whole story firsthand, and I am very glad you were able to come."

I had not expected to remain more than a few minutes, as I understood that four minutes is considered a long audience with the king. Fifty-two minutes elapsed before I finally left there! During all this time I had done most of the talking, in response to the king's request to tell my story. Occasionally he interrupted to ask a question about a point he wanted me to make clear, but for the most part he was content to play the part of a listener. He seemed to be very keen on everything and when I described some of the tight holes I got into during my escape he evinced his sympathy. Oc-casionally I introduced some of the few humorous incidents of my adventure and in every instance he laughed heartily. Altogether the impression I got of him was that he is a very genial, gracious and alert sovereign. I know

I have felt more ill at ease when talking to a major than when speaking to the king-but perhaps I had more cause to.

During the whole interview we woro left entirely alone, which impressed me as significant of the democratic manner of the present king of England, and I certainly came away with the utmost respect for him. In all my conversation, I recalled afterwards. I never addressed the Savoy by a fellow officer who had bet three other friends of mine that I would be home by Christmas. This wager had been made at the time he heard that I was a prisoner of war, and the dinner was the stake.

The first intimation he had of my safe return from Germany and the fact that he had won his bet was a telegram I sent him reading as follows:

"Lieut. Louis Grand: "War bread bad, so I came home." "PAT."

He said he would not part with that message for a thousand dollars. Other banquets followed in fast succession. After I had survived nine of them I figured that I was now in as much danger of succumbing to a surfeit of rich food as I had previously been of dying from starvation, and for my own protection, I decided to leave London. Moreover, my thoughts and my heart were turning back to the land of my birth, where I knew there was a loving mother who was longing for more substantial evidence of my safe escape than the cables and letters she had received.

Strangely enough, on the boat which 🗭 carried me across the Atlantic, I saw an R. F. C. man-Lleutenant Lascelles.

I walked over to him, held out my hand and said "Hello!"

He looked at me steadily for at least a minute.

"My friend, you certainly look like Pat O'Brien," he declared, "but I can't believe my eyes. Who are you?"

I quickly convinced him that his eyes were still to be relied upon, and then he stared at me for another minute or two, shaking his head dubiousty.

His mystification was quite explicable. The last time he had seen me I was going down to earth with a bullet in my face and my machine doing a spinning-nose dive. He was one of my comrades in the flying corps

The naval officer who accompanied me and acted as interpreter for me introduced me to many other soldiers and sailors who had escaped from Belgium when the Germans took Antwerp, and as they had arrived in Holland in uniform and under arms, the laws of neutrality compelled their internment and they had been there ever since.

The life of a man who is interned in a neutral county, I learned, is anything but satisfactory. He gets one month a year to visit his home. If he lives in England that is not so bad, but if he happens to live farther away, the time he has to spend with his folks is very short, as the month's leave does not take into consideration the time consumed in traveling to and from Holland.

The possibility of escape from Holland is always there, but the British authorities have an agreement with the Dutch government to send refugees back immediately. In this respect, therefore, the position of a man who is interned is worse than that of a prisoner who, if he does succeed in making his escape, is naturally received with open arms in his native land. Apart from this restraint, however, internment, with all its drawbacks, is a thousand times, yes, a million times, better than being a prisoner of war in Germany.

It seems to me that when the war is over and the men who have been imprisoned in Germany return home, they should be given a bigger and greater reception than the most victorious army that ever marched into a city for they will have suffered and gone through more than the world will ever be able to understand. No doubt you will find in the Gorman prison camps one or two fainthearted individuals with a pronounced yellow streak who voluntarily gave up the struggle and gave up their liborty rather than risk their lives or limbs. These sad cases, however, are, I am sure, extremely few. Nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand of the men fighting in the allod lines would rather available front trenches,

"Knew he'd be back for Christmas, anyway," I could hear another remark.

"I had an idea that Pat and his comrades might spend Christmas in Berlin," I could hear another admitting, "but I did not think any other part of Germany would appeal to him very much." "Mrs. O'Brien, did Pat write you how many German prisoners he brought back with him?" I could hear ing.

It was all very amusing and gratiquite cocky as I walked into the war department to report.

For the next five days I was kept very busy answering questions put to me by the military authorities regarding what I had observed as to conditions in Germany and behind the lines. What I reported was taken down by a stenographer and made part of the official records, but I did not give them my story in narrative form. The information I was able to give was naturally of interest to various and tell him and half a dozen othe branches of the service, and experts in every line of government work took periences.

Before I left he asked me what my plans for the future were.

"Why, sir, I hope to rejoin my squadron at the earliest possible moment!" I replied.

"No, Leftenant," he rejoined. "that is out of the question. We can't risk losing you for good by sending you back to a part of the front opposed by Germans, because if you were unfortunate enough to be captured again they would undoubtedly shoot you.'

"Well, if I can't serve in France, sir," I suggested, "wouldn't it be feasible for me to fly in Italy or Salonica?"

"No," he replied, "that would be almost as bad. The only thing that I can suggest for you to do is either to take up instruction-a very valuable form of service-or perhaps it might be safe enough for you to serve in Egypt, but just at present, leftenant, I think you have done enough anyway."

Then he rose and shook hands with me and wished me the best of luck, and we both said "Good-by,"

In the adjoining room I met Earl Cromer again, and as he accompanied me to the door seemed to be surprised at the length of my visit.

THE OAK CREEK TIMES.

Washington, Oct. 15 .- The text of President Wilson's reply to Germany, delivered to the charge of the Swiss legation, follows:

sur-In reply to the communication of the German government dated th 12th inst., which you handed me today, I have the honor to request you to transmit the following answer:

"The unqualified acceptance by the present German government and by a large majority of the reichstag of the terms laid down by the Prezident of the United States of America in his address to the Congress of the United States on Jan. 8, 1918, and in his subsiquent addresses justifies the President in making a frank and direct statement of his decision with regard to the communications of the German government of Oct. 8 and 12, 1918.

"It must be clearly understood that the process of evacuation and the conditions of an armistice are matters which must be left to the judgment and advice of the military advisers of the government of the United States and the allied governments, and the President feels it his duty to say that no arrangement can be accepted by the government of the United Stat which does not provide absolutely satisfactory safeguards and guarantee of the maintenance of the present military supremacy of the armies of 1 United States and the allies in the field.

"He feels confident that he can safely assume that this will also be the judgment and decision of the allied governments.

"The President feels that it is also his duty to add that neither the government of the United States, nor, he is quite sure, the governments with which the government of the United States is associated as a belligerent will consent to consider an armistice so long as the armed forces of Germany continue the illegal and inhumane practices which they still persist in.

"At the very time that the German government approaches the government of the United States with proposals of peace its submarines are engaged in sinking pasenger ships at sea and not the ships alone, but the very boats in which their passengers and crews seek to make their way to safety; and in their present enforced withdrawal from Flanders and France the German armies are pursuing a course of wanton destruction which has always been regarded as in direct violation of the rules and practices of civilized warfare. Cities and villages. if not destroyed, are being stripped of all they contain not only, but often of their very inhabitants. The nations associated against Germany cannot be expected to agree to a cessation of arms while acts of inhumanity, spoliation and desolation are being continued which they justly look upon with horror and with burning hearts.

"It is necessary, also, in order that there may be no possibility of misunderstanding, that the President should

Ice Boxes on Wheels

Refrigerator cars for carrying meat are ice boxes traveling on wheels.

Most people in America would have to go without fresh meat, or would have to pay more for what they could get, if it were not for these traveling ice boxes.

Gustavus F. Swift, the first Swift in the packing industry, saw the need of these traveling ice boxes before others.

He asked the railroads to build them. The railroads refused. They were equipped, and preferred to haul cattle rather than dressed beef.

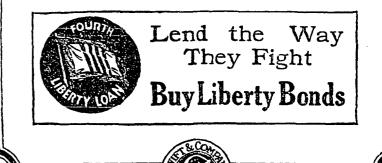

So Gustavus F. Swift had to make the cars himself. The first one was a box car rigged up to hold ice. Now there are 7,000 Swift refrigerator cars. Each one is as fine an ice box as you have in your home.

Day and night, fair weather and foul, through heat and cold, these 7,000 cars go rolling up and down the country, keeping meat just right, on its way to you.

Thus another phase of Swift & Company's activities has grown to meet a need no one else could or would supply, in way that matched Swift & Company ideas of being useful.

When you see one of these Swift & Company cars in a train, or on a siding, you will be reminded of what is being done for you as the fruit of experience and a desire to serve.

The acid is an power-ful that is eath right fitrough the lard enamel and causes the teeth to decay. This is fair warning of what excess acid-ity will do to the delicate organization of the stomach as a maiter of fact, ex-cess acidity not only produces a great many painful and disagreeable arymp-toms that we generally meme "Honneh truthes," but it is the creator of a long train di very soriclas allments. Acid-atin contact, formented food passes into the infesting, where it becomes the breeding place for germs and totle poisons, which in turn are subsoried into the blood and distributed through-out the sories of the sories and stomach and the contact the poisons, where it becomes the breeding place for germs and totle poisons, where he time, culture, wherever you go you see vicins of acid atomach and star ways, aling-have no appetits, food corent digest, betting all the time, continually com-paining all the time, continually com-plaining of being weak and tired and worn out. It is this access acidity that takes the pep and punch est of them, leaves little or no vitality. Britke at the very cause of all this trouble and clean this excess acid out of the etomach. This will give the stom-ach a chance to digraf the food properly; nature will do the rest. A wonderful usw remedy removes ex-fort. It is called EATONIO, trails in the form of tableis-they are good to est -just like a bit of candy. RATONIO literally absorbs the injurious excess acid and carries it away through the in-testines. It drives the bloat out of the body--you can fairly feel it work. Ty RATONIO and see how quickly it banishes bloat, hearthurn, belching, food-repeating, indigetion, etc. Bee too, how quickly your general health iniprovos --- how merousness and initiality absorber the prover and energy to work with vian. mass meeting. Mr. McAdoo told the audience the text of the reply and added:

"What this government demands, based on President Wilson's messages and speeches, is unconditional surrender, and if the text of this reply is authentic it means just that."

Before telling the audience about the German note, Mr. McAdoo said of the first German note a week ago: "Germany didn't send its note to anyone except the United States. Why? Because the President of the United States has formulated the principles of a permanent peace.

"Germany knows that when she accepts the President5s conditions—I am not talking terms, but conditions, principles-when she is off the soil of every invaded land, it means unconditional surrender.

"What is unconditional surrender? It is when the fellow you are fighting says. 'I give in and take what you say I ought to take."

"The kaiser might as well surrender now. He isn't deluded now, He wouldn'ts get into the war but he did think at one time that America knows better now."

very solemnly call the attention of the government of Germany to the language and plain intent of one of the terms of peace which the German government has now accepted. It is contained in the address of the President delivered at Mount Vernon on the Fourth of July last.

"It is as follows: 'The destruction of every arbitrary power anywhere that can separately, secretly and of its single choice disturb the peace of the world; or, if it cannot be presently destroyed, at least its reduction to virtual impotency.'

"The power which has hitherto contiolled the German nation is of the sort here described. It is within the choice of the German nation to alter it. The President's words just quoted naturally constitute a condition precedent to peace, if peace is to come by the action of the German people themselves. The President feels bound to say that the whole process of peace will, in his judgment, depend upon the definiteness and the satisfactory character of the guarantees which can be given in this fundamental matter. It is indispensable that the governments associated against Germany should know beyond a peradventure with
